A Heanor author is celebrating this week after his second book hit the shelves.

Neal James, author of A Ticket to Tewkesbury has had a volume of 36 short stories released by his publisher.

He said: "I have been writing for less than three years.

"After my first book I offered the publishers another 85,000-word novel but they said they were looking for a collection of short stories. I sent them 40, they took 36, and it went from there.

"The studio has done a really marvellous job, the front cover looks just as I hoped it would.

"I am really pleased with it."
