About the Book

A delightful medley of short stories

In 'Serendipity' there is something for everyone. If your taste is humour there are plenty including 'It's No Laughing Matter', 'Stop! ...Don't Go Any Further'. There are slices of real life in 'Arthur', 'Lanky Franky', 'Death of the Hindenburg' and 'My Only Sunshine'. There is satire and irreligious ones—written without any malice. In the animal stories 'The Dog', 'The Gulls' Court' and 'The Camel' the author gives himself full rein and enjoyed exercising anthropomorphism. In short 'Serendipity' is the word - take a dip and find your winner.

Author John Butler says "In this miscellany of fifty or more stories runs the gamut from humour, drama, satire, farce and fantasy to contemplative thinking, mystery and the supernatural. Serendipity embraces all the human emotions. Enjoy it!"

John Butler is a retired head teacher and lecturer; he has spent forty years in education. For many years he has taught creative writing to adult groups.

Being an avid reader of short stories, the author has enjoyed journeying along with the likes of Mark Twain, O'Henry, Maupassant, Frank O'Connor and others of such ilk...
